

During a disaster is not a good time to start planning...

In isolated rural areas natural disasters can happen at any time. You never know when you might need to evacuate because of severe flooding and or wildfires that threaten your home. Be prepared!

Creating an evacuation plan

Make it Yours

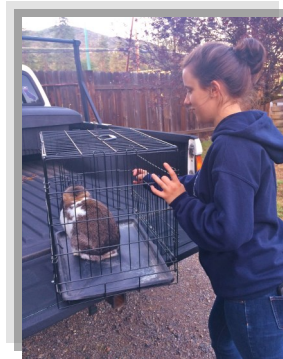

Make a plan before an emergency. Pre-planning will help in a crisis. Local agencies have limited resources, so you need to ready yourself to safely evacuate your animals. Have a location you can safely relocate to. Choose somewhere far away, not your neighbor! They may be under the same evacuation order. If you have to go to a shelter your animals may not be allowed. Remember, your pets rely on you to keep them safe in an emergency!

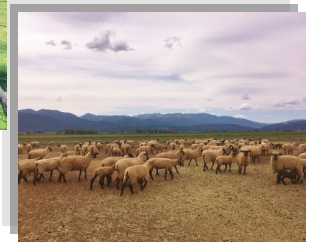

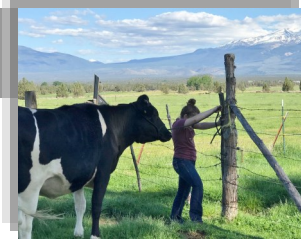

What to Include

Have an emergency kit ready to go with everything that you will need to grab and go.

- ⇒ Food for Several Days
- ⇒ Water
- ⇒ Medications
- ⇒ First Aid Items
- ⇒ Vet/Shot Records
- ⇒ Recent Photos of You with Your Animal
- ⇒ Crates, Halters, Leashes, or Harnesses
- ⇒ Sanitation Items/Litter
- ⇒ Any Comfort Items/Pet Toys/Blankets

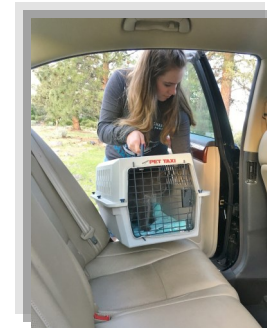

They are counting on you!

Large Animals

Large Animals can be trailered out or left in a green pasture with troughs of water to last for several days. In case of a flood, higher ground would be preferred. If possible, mark your animal with a phone number using permanent marker on the hoof or spray paint it on the side of your animal. Emergency tagging can take many forms but remember to be prepared.

Small Animals

Remember to keep vaccination records in your go bag. Many shelters will not allow your pet in without them. If you must leave your small pet behind, keep them inside, don't chain them up outside. Leave out food and water in non-spill containers. If possible, open a faucet and allow it to drip into a large container, such as a bathtub.
